S5 course 2 25/26

- When do we use gerund or infinitive?
- When we have to use a verb after another verb or a certain kind of word, we sometimes use an infinitive or a gerund. It often depends on the word that comes before. Here's a list of the main situations in which we use infinitives or gerunds.
  Verbs that take gerund or infinitive with a change of meaningForgetForget to do something: Used to talk about things that we need to do, and we forget to do them.
    - I think we forgot to lock the door when we left.
    - Don't forget to call me when you finish.
- Forget doing something: It's normally used in negative sentences. Used to talk about memories –generally about past events that we will not forget.
    - I'll never forget walking on that amazing beach for the first time.
- RememberRemember to do something: Used to talk about things we need to do.
    - He didn't remember to turn off the heating after class.
